In his new position, Stevenson's previous responsibilities for the company's fleet (1,200 vehicles) and materials management have been expanded to include purchasing. "The overall efficiency and productivity these departments will benefit from increased collaboration within the newly combined group," said Aqua America CFO Dave Smeltzer, under whose organization the position now falls. "It's a natural fit to place our purchasing operation in the same arena as our inventory and materials management operation."

Stevenson joined Aqua in 1987 as a service technician and held various positions of increased responsibility before being promoted to manager of fleet in 2001. He was promoted to his most recent position of manager of fleet and materials management in 2007, assuming
